Objective:

The objective of offering classical dance programs in a university is to provide students with opportunities to learn and appreciate traditional dance forms that are rooted in cultural heritage and artistic expression. Key objectives of classical dance programs include:

1. Cultural Awareness: To cultivate an understanding and appreciation of diverse cultural traditions and dance styles, fostering respect for cultural diversity and promoting cross-cultural understanding.
2. Performance Opportunities: To provide students with opportunities to showcase their skills and talents through dance performances, recitals, and cultural events, enhancing their confidence, stage presence, and performance abilities.

Description:

Classical dance programs in a university introduce students to the rich traditions and techniques of traditional dance forms that have been passed down through generations. These programs typically focus on styles such as ballet, Bharatanatyam, Kathak, Odissi, and other classical dance forms from various cultures around the world. This event was conducted through online platform.

In a university setting, classical dance classes provide students with a structured curriculum that emphasizes technical proficiency, artistic expression, and cultural appreciation. Students learn fundamental dance movements, footwork, hand gestures, body alignment, and storytelling through dance. They also study the history, cultural context, and aesthetic principles of classical dance, gaining a deeper understanding of its significance and impact.

Outcome:

Overall, the outcome of classical dance programs in a university is a holistic and enriching experience that enhances students' artistic abilities, cultural appreciation, physical well-being, self-confidence, and personal growth, contributing to a vibrant and inclusive campus environment.
